Bombing trial

Bishops speak out against execution

A jury began deliberating on Tuesday in the trial of Boston Marathon bombing suspect Dzhokhar Tsarnaev.

Representatives of the Roman Catholic Bishops of Massachusetts distributed fliers outside court reiterating the church's opposition to capital punishment.

"The defendant in this case has been neutralized and will never again cause harm," read the statement, signed by Cardinal Sean O'Malley of Boston and three bishops. "Society can do better than the death penalty."

The dirtiest job: Meet the guys who clean up death

Aftermath. This job really requires you to roll up your sleeves and hold down your lunch.

Bill Ciaccio pauses between bites of his turkey and cranberry sauce sandwich to talk about the dead woman on the toilet.

Ciaccio, 35, works for Aftermath, a company that specializes in trauma cleaning and biohazard removal, which is a nice way of saying they clean up dead bodies. These are the guys who get called to clean up a scene of a homicide or removal of a body that has been decomposing for weeks.

Ciaccio is recalling one particular gruesome anecdote. An elderly woman had died while on the toilet. The body had been there for several weeks. Gravity, during the interim, had taken over. The bowl was now filled with a mound of innards and maggots. An attempt is made to flush the toilet. It starts to over-

Dirty jobs

Ciaccio estimates his crew does 150 biohazard cleanups per year, mostly in Massachusetts.

- Suicides by shotgun are usually large jobs, according to the company. Sometimes, the entire room needs to be disinfected and some structural work needs to be done. A ceiling or a section of drywall will have to be replaced because of the debris, or floors will have to be ripped up because of the pooling of fluids.
- His crew cleans out the drunk tanks when someone has urinated, bled or vomited all over the cells. They clean out state trooper cruisers when similar things happen in the back of those cars. They've done jobs for the T when need be. They clean out houses of hoarders. No, they don't do chemical spills. And don't ask them to clean out your meth lab.

flow as a crew member reaches for the shut-off valve.

"The guy goes shoulder-deep into the goo and let's out this primordial squeal," Ciaccio said. "It's the only time I've thrown up on the job."

They tick off weird and disgusting anecdotes, like the time someone murdered someone else and painted 666 on the walls with blood.

"This is not a glamorous job," said Aftermath employee Andrew Whitmarsh. "You're going to see some nasty things; you're going to see some emotionally wrecked people."

The job, said Ciaccio, can be rewarding. Oftentimes, the cleanups allow people who are mourning, people who just weathered trauma, to begin some semblance of healing.

"I do actually enjoy the work," he said. "I know that sounds kind of morbid, but the good part about it is helping people out who need your help."

'Chronic underinvestment' at T: Task force

T riders squeeze into a bus at Kenmore Square. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

The MBTA, which shoulders significant debt from past borrowing efforts, spent just over half of the amount budgeted for capital projects in 2014, contributing to "chronic underinvestment" and a backlog of unaddressed maintenance needs, a task force studying the agency has concluded.

The Baker administration, which formed the task force, released the latest bit of information from its work on Tuesday after disclosing on Monday that task force members have raised excessive employee absenteeism, rising costs and revenue concerns as challenges facing the T, which suffered from service failures this winter.

Rehashing recently reported news, the task force found that in 2014, $631 million of the $1.3 billion that the T had budgeted for capital projects

Here's why Malia Obama should study in Boston

Opinion. A Metro intern and Boston University student makes a case as to why the first daughter should study in the Hub.

President Barack Obama's eldest daughter Malia has been touring top universities, and recently she was spotted at Harvard and Tufts universities. As first daughter, it's undoubtedly difficult deciding which top-tier school to attend, but here are a few reasons why we think Malia should attend college in the greatest city on Earth.

1 Malia already lives in one of the most history-laden and ethnically diverse cities in America. So why not move to a city that has that same culture?

Malia Obama / GETTY IMAGES

She can follow the Freedom Trail from the Boston Common to the Harbor. Feeling like getting some culture instead? Take a trip on over to the Museum of Fine Arts, where college students get free admission. Whether she's downing a beer at a pub in South Boston (after she turns 21, of course) or chowing on dumplings or Dim Sum in Chinatown, Malia is sure to get her cultural fix with any of Boston's diverse communities.

2 Boston is a large urban area with over 80 colleges and universities, but the city couldn't be any smaller. Boston gives the best of both worlds; the allure of a big city with a small-town feel. It's the perfect size for a college student to explore but not get too lost in and just far away enough from her parents.

3 With a Super Bowl win this year and a World Series win last year, it's no secret that Boston is a sports-oriented city. It won't be hard for Malia to get behind the Sox, Pats, Bruins and Celtics when the fans are so loyal and the teams so successful. With game discounts for college students left and right, it won't be difficult for her to catch a game at Fenway or the Garden on the weekends to unwind from that rigorous course load.

4 Boston's music scene has been dramatically expanding. With Paradise Rock Club, The Sinclair, Great Scott, and the House of Blues all so close to each other, there's never a dull night in town. Young and hip acts are constantly stopping in the city as well as big-name artists.

5 And not for nothing, but her dad went to Harvard Law School. Can you say, alumni pride? Let's face it, Boston is the best city for Malia to bury her face in books and meet the people she'll be calling friends for life. Since she's only a junior at Sidwell Friends in Washington, D.C., she still has some time to decide where she wants to go, but we're hoping that this list just made things that much easier for her.

Five things you need to know

Widespread power outages hit White House, D.C. area

A power outage hit the White House and much of the Washington area on Tuesday, snarling trains, emptying museums and cutting electricity to government buildings and the U.S. Capitol.

The Justice Department and State Department were also affected, along with the University of Maryland. Power company Pepco Holdings Inc.

said the outage stemmed from a dip in voltage because of transmission line trouble.

Power was briefly knocked out to the White House, delaying the daily press briefing.

The "power outage [is] affecting many parts of the city, and it affected the White House complex. We were on a backup generator, and now we are back on normal power," a White House spokesman said.

An official at the Department of Homeland Security said in an email: "At this time, there is no indication that this outage is the result of any malicious activity." REUTERS

Twitter shares jumped 5 percent, and activity in its options surged on Tuesday on unsubstantiated market chatter about the company fending off a takeover bid.

The microblogging service provider's shares rose to $53.28, the highest they have been since October, on market chatter that the company has hired advisers to rebuff a takeover bid.

Twitter's options were unusually active on Tuesday with total volume more than 250,000 contracts, or twice the average daily volume, according to Trade Alert data.

Kenyan students march to demand more security

Kenyan university students marched in the capital on Tuesday to demand more security from the government after gunmen killed 148 people at a campus in the town of Garissa last week.

A citizens group held a vigil in Nairobi's main park later in the evening, grieving for those killed in the attack claimed by al Shabaab Islamists based in neighboring Somalia.

Last Thursday, gunmen from the al Qaeda-aligned group stormed Garissa University College, some 120 miles from the Somali border.

Rand Paul promises to 'take our country back' in 2016 bid

Paul. The libertarian has built a reputation for challenging party orthodoxy.

Sen. Rand Paul promised to be a different kind of Republican on Tuesday, launching a 2016 White House bid that he said would highlight the conservative principles of reduced government and spending as he vowed to break up "the Washington machine."

The senator from Kentucky criticized Republicans in Congress and recent Republican presidents for helping to drive up the federal debt and reducing personal liberties.

"We have come to take our country back," he told cheering supporters on a flag-draped stage in Louisville, Kentucky, promising to break up "the Washington machine that gobbles up our freedoms and invades every nook and cranny of our lives."

With his announcement, Paul becomes the second major Republican to announce presidential ambitions for 2016, after Texas Sen. Ted Cruz. A crowded field is expected, with candidates competing hard for constituencies ranging from the Christian right to traditional Wall Street Republicans.

Paul starts the campaign in the second tier of Republican candidates, drawing the support of 8.4 percent of Republicans, according to a March Reuters/Ipsos tracking poll.

That puts him behind former Florida Gov. Jeb Bush, who is considered a top contender although he has not declared himself a presidential candidate; Wisconsin Gov. Scott Walker; and former Arkansas Gov. Mike Huckabee.

Seven people killed in Illinois crash of small airplane

Plane. The FAA identified the airplane as a Cessna 414, which is a twin-engine airplane that carries up to 10 people.

A small private airplane crashed early on Tuesday on approach to a runway at a central Illinois airport, killing all seven people onboard including two members of the Illinois State University athletic department, officials said.

Torrey Ward, the associate head coach for Illinois State's men's basketball team, and Aaron Leetch, the deputy director of athletics for external operations, died in the plane crash, the university said.

The Chicago Tribune reported that the dead included the partner in a local bar in the Bloomington-Normal area and owner of a meat processing business who had attended the NCAA Final Four Championship men's basketball game on Monday night.

The airplane had left Indianapolis, about 160 miles to

Sanctions, higher costs considered under California drought plan

California may require communities that use more water to pay higher rates and issue sanctions against those who do not conserve, in the state's first-ever mandatory cutbacks in urban water use amid an ongoing drought, regulators said Tuesday. The tactics and issues under consideration for a still-developing conservation plan were distributed at a meeting of the State Water Resources Board on Tuesday. The broad-brush outline presented on Tuesday indicated that regulators would consider requiring tiered billing based on the amount of water that people use, something already in effect in many cities, including Los Angeles. Tiered billing could also affect local utilities, which would pay more for water if they cannot get their customers to conserve beyond a specific target set by the state. REUTERS

Taking Your Vision To The Next Level

At New England Eye Center, we truly are taking sight to the next level. Thanks to recent advances in laser and lens implant technology, our highly-trained specialists are helping patients of all ages enjoy the type of clearer, more natural vision they desire. Vision for the way we live here in New England!

Your Eyes Deserve A Surgeon with VISION!

Director of Refractive Surgery
Helen K. Wu, M.D.

To become an accomplished surgeon in refractive surgery, it's important to have VISION and experience backed by consistent patient outcomes and reviews by physician peers. For more than two decades, leading eye surgeon Helen Wu, M.D. has helped set new standards in the field of vision correction-offering the most advanced vision correction options, tailored to each patient's medical and lifestyle needs.

Today, Dr. Wu is the Director of Vision Correction Surgery at the New England Eye Center, affiliated with Tufts University School of Medicine, located in Boston, Massachusetts. She has been performing LASIK, PRK, ICLs and now advanced lens all-laser cataract surgery at New England Eye Center since 1992.

From our all-laser, bladeless LASIK procedure - to exciting developments like our Vision Implantable lens - our commitment to leading edge technology is surpassed only by our dedication to personalized patient care. Patients of New England Eye Center find confidence in knowing we offer experience you can trust and technology you can rely on. NASA-Approved LASIK - Our all-laser, bladeless LASIK at New England Eye Center has greatly improved results and helped take the fear out of having LASIK. The vast majority of our LASIK and PRK patients now achieve 20/20 vision at distance without glasses or contact lenses. Our method of LASIK is the same type approved for NASA astronauts and military pilots.

Implantable Contact Lens - New England Eye Center is among a select group of practices in the country offering patients the benefits of the Vision Implantable Collamer Lens (ICL). Unlike LASIK, the Vision corrects vision by inserting a delicate intracocular lens-like device atop the eye's natural lens, which is why the Vision is also referred to as the 'Implantable Contact Lens.' All of the refractive surgeons at New England Eye Center are qualified and experienced in performing this brief outpatient procedure to insert the Vision ICL. Because no corneal or other tissue is removed in the Vision ICL procedure, visual recovery is extremely rapid and the ICL can potentially be replaced if the eye's focus changes over time.

Refractive Lens Exchange - If you're frustrated with reading glasses and bifocals, our refractive specialists perform a procedure known as Refractive Lens Exchange. By replacing your eye's aging natural lens with an Intraocular Lens Implant customized specifically for your visual needs - and your lifestyle - allowing you to see better, look younger and never have to worry about developing cataracts!

Laser Cataract Surgery - For seniors experiencing changes in their vision - or who have been diagnosed with a cataract - New England Eye Center is turning the dream of Laser Cataract Surgery into reality. We are currently among only the top 3% of practices in the country to offer patients the added precision and accuracy of Laser Cataract Surgery using OptiMedica® Catalys™ Precision Laser System.

This year, take your vision to the NEXT LEVEL by giving yourself a loved one the Gift of Sight. Now that's a Gift that keeps on Giving. A blessed New Year from the surgeons and staff of New England Eye Center.

Mom finds marijuana in Walmart toy

An Oregon mother says she got more than she bargained for when she picked up an Easter gift for her toddler in the clearance section of a local Walmart.

Christina Marie Hannahs, of Otis, said she found three bags of marijuana stuffed inside the "Smart Shots Sports Center" basketball toy, according to a police spokesman in the city of Newport, where the item was purchased.

The toy, made by VTech, is for children between the ages of 1 and 2 and comes with multiple parts including balls to toss in a basket and a screen that lights up.

Hannahs told local broadcaster KATU that, as she assembled the item for her toddler, she found some parts were missing. Left behind in the box were the clear plastic bags of what she said was marijuana.

Don't worry, Lorde and Taylor still going strong

They're probably FaceTiming as we speak. / ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

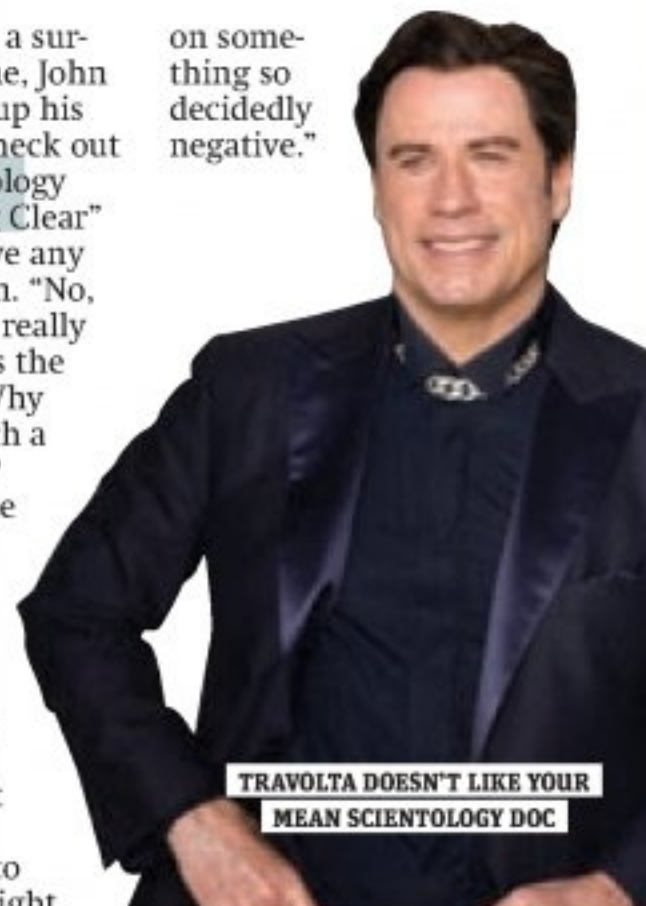

Reports of Taylor Swift and Lorde downgrading their BFF status have been greatly exaggerated, according to no less than Swift herself. When media speculation started swirling that the two were at odds over not being able to agree on a duet to record, Swift took to Twitter to put the naysayers in their place. "Media, when you say, 'Lorde and Taylor are fighting,' by fighting do you mean 'FaceTiming constantly from [the] U.S. to [New Zealand] and LOLing at you?' So that settles it, I guess. No need to worry, everybody. Also, what's the female equivalent of a bromance? I feel like we should have a word for that. Any suggestions?

News flash: John Travolta hasn't seen 'Going Clear'

In what may come as a surprise to exactly no one, John Travolta hasn't fired up his HBO Go account to check out Alex Gibney's Scientology documentary, "Going Clear" — and he doesn't have any plans to anytime soon. "No, I haven't, and I don't really care to," Travolta tells the Tampa Bay Times. "Why would I even approach a negative perspective? That would be a crime to me, personally, to do that." Yikes. And even though he hasn't seen it, he knows it's not very good: "I've been so happy with my experience in the last 40 years that I really don't have anything to say that would shed light on something so decidedly negative."

Lindsay Lohan focusing on her career, apparently

This may come as something of a shock, but Lindsay Lohan hasn't had much time to worry about dating because all her attention has been going to her career. No, really. "I haven't really thought about [dating] in a while, I've been so focused on my career," the still-London-based actress tells Homme Style magazine. But if she were to start stepping out with some guy? "At this time, I'd probably have to say someone not in show business, maybe a businessman, but I'm just enjoying being single and enjoying experiencing everything here." But be ready, businessmen of London, she may call on you at any moment.

Lohan is focusing on "work."

Beware ex-girlfriends bearing memoirs

Kudos to Giuliana Rancic for this epic piece of misdirection. Instead of talking about how she lost her gig on "Fashion Police" for some pretty terrible jokes, Rancic would prefer everyone focus on her relationship with Jerry O'Connell from more than a decade ago, when — according to Rancic's new memoir — the former "Sliders" star stepped out on her with Geri "Ginger Spice" Halliwell. "I was being two-timed for one of the lesser Spices?" she writes, reporting that O'Connell responded, "Yeah, I know. I'm so sorry. I don't know what happened." He had as much emotion as the customer-service representative who tells you your bags missed the flight." OK, first of all, your material is still pretty terrible. And second of all, Ginger Spice is a "lesser" Spice Girl? Hardly. I mean, Sporty Spice maybe, but Ginger was never "lesser."

Between "Broad City" and "Key and Peele," it seems to be the era of the comedy duo. In the new show "The Comedians," we're introduced to a new pair: Josh Gad and Billy Crystal. They play fictionalized versions of themselves, forced to work together on a sketch-comedy show. We talk to Gad about working with a comedy legend.

What made you want to play yourself on TV?

I was excited by the idea of two comedians coming from two completely different places generationally, approaching the same vocation from such different places and mixing that with the ego and id of it all. ... Working alongside Billy Crystal and getting a phone call saying we want you to play this young comedian opposite Billy, it's a dream come true.

Do you notice a lot of differences between your comedy and Billy's?

You know what's interesting is not so much the differences, which you would think there would be a lot of, which the show goes into, but the similarities. We both talk about the fact that we got our start going to a borscht belt comedy show in the middle of the Catskills when we were like, 5 years old.

The show mocks your failures, but you've also been in huge successes, like "Book of Mormon" and "Frozen." I've been very lucky, and I've also been unlucky. A lot of times you make creative choices that you believe in and then it's like, oh, that was a big screwup. Which is the beauty of the show: We get to make fun of things that may have been failures or the things we're embarrassed by.

Persona

Meet "Josh Gad"

Is there more freedom for you to invent a version of yourself because Billy has had such a long career?

That's the beauty of playing [the show's] version of Josh Gad. I can take liberties that I think Billy can't just because of who he is and how well-known he is. I'm married in real life with two children. I'm a philanthropist on the show with no children, no wife. I've got 10 times the ego on the show that I do in real life — hopefully people know that. There are liberties that I get to take that are liberating and scary at the same time.

Return of the Riot Grrrl

Interview. After recovering from a decade of illness, Kathleen Hanna is back on tour.

Mention the '90s feminist/punk rock movement Riot Grrrl, and two things come to mind: the band Bikini Kill and its activist frontwoman, Kathleen Hanna. Since then, Hanna has started two other bands, Le Tigre and The Julie Ruin, battled Lyme disease and married fellow '90s music icon, Beastie Boy Adam Horowitz. On Thursday, she'll be at the Wilbur Theatre to talk about it all for "An Evening with Kathleen Hanna." She chatted with us about her '90s days, feminism in the music industry and how it feels to get back on stage.

What can people expect from an evening with you?

I'm going to hit on Riot Grrrl, because that's what people want to hear about — the '90s punk [scene] and how I've grown as an artist and personally. I'm assuming a lot of the audience is going to be activists and people who are interested in politics and music and how the two mix, so I really want to talk about that and some of the pitfalls of being in a leadership role and not really knowing what you're doing. [Laughs]

Hanna is promising a Q&A to follow, so just try to ask something cool, OK? For more with Hanna, head to Metro.us. / ALIYA NAUMOFF

How do you feel about feminism in the new millennium?

We're in a really good place now. There's still massive amounts of violence against women, there's still inequity in pay, we still don't have the [Equal Rights Act]. There's still so many problems, clearly. But the great news is people are actually talking about it like it's real, and it's not normal and it's not OK. It's not as naturalized as it was in the '90s.

What about in music?

There's so many more feminist-identified women in bands that I just feel really excited about the international conversation that's taking place about what it means to be a female-identified person in music, and there is still a real disparity in pay and in the way you get treated, and the way you get spoken about and that kind of thing.

Which artists do you think are carrying on the torch?

I really like Lauren Mayberry from Chvrches. She says a lot of really smart things. I'm really excited about Beyoncé, to be perfectly honest, because I'm a sucker for her music. She writes great songs; she's an amazing singer. Having an all-woman band on tour and stepping out with the huge neon lights that say "feminist" — that was a big moment for us.

Revivals

Onstage again

How does it feel to be performing again?

When I get on stage, I'm totally happy. I feel so f—ing grateful that people leave their homes and come out to see a band that I'm in or come out to see a lecture that I give. ... It feels so much better than it did in the '90s, because in the '90s it was always guys yelling, "Take it off!" and trying to beat us up and stuff, and now everyone's like, "love, love, love." It's a different world, and we came out on the right side of history.

Ludacris finally gets his fight scene

Fast talk. The “Furious 7” star has been waiting to let his fists fly.

Playing the tech guy in a series of heist movies like the “Fast and Furious” franchise often means you have to sit out most of the big, all-out brawls. But that wasn’t working for Ludacris. So for “Furious 7,” he wanted to make sure his character, Tej, gets to whoop some ass. Oh, and drive some pretty nice cars, too.

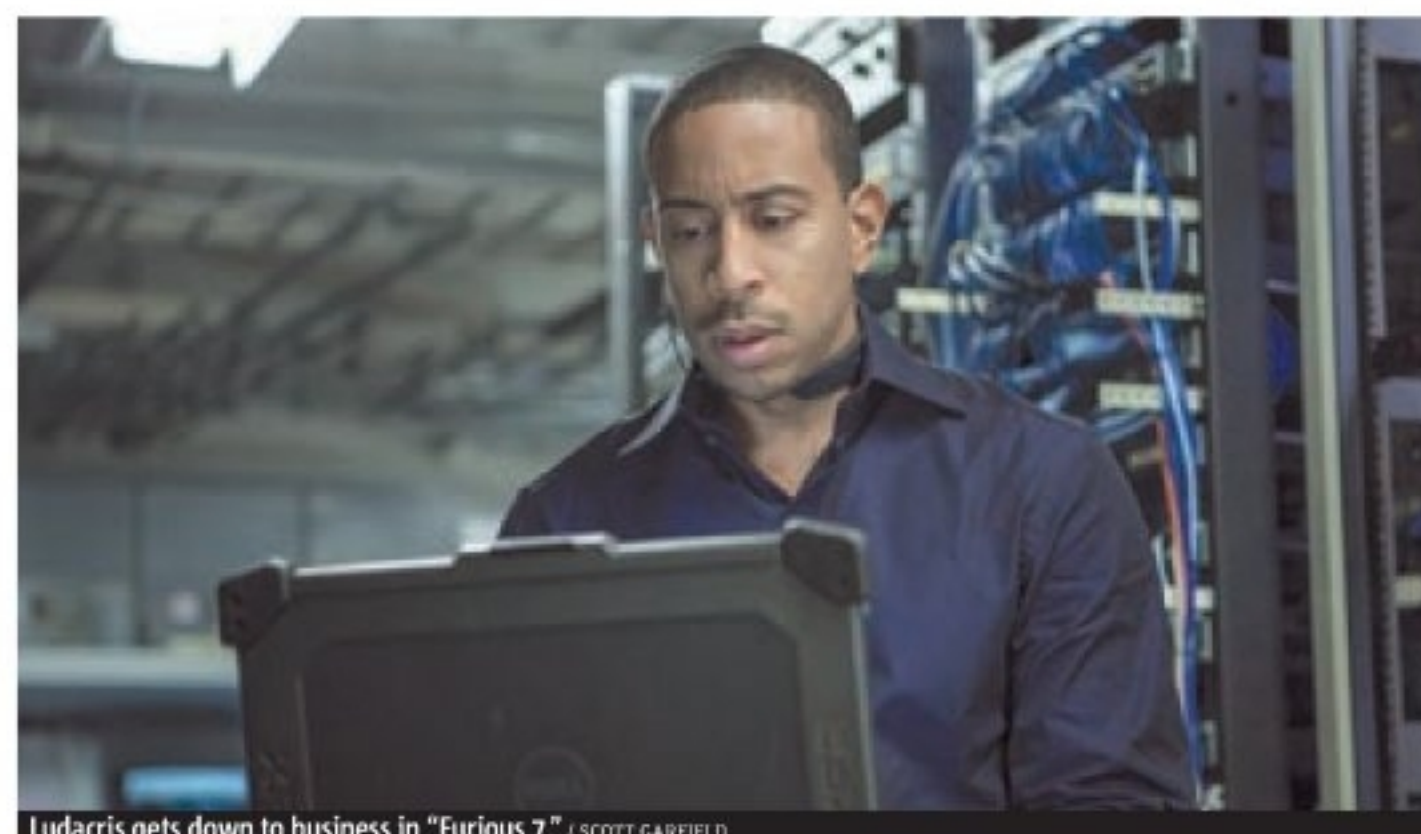

You usually avoid the fights in these films.

You know, I’m behind the scenes with the computers, the brains of the operation. I was pushing for one, though. It wasn’t in the script; I had to get it in there. So it was only right. I was like, “Here’s an opportunity here where I can kick some ass.” I’ve been practicing this martial art called 52 Blocks, so I was able to kind of do a demo reel and show the director and the producer what it was that I wanted to do, and they were able to incorporate it. So we’re good.

What does 52 Blocks incorporate?

Fifty-Two Blocks has a lot of knees, elbows and head in it, and it’s been around for a long time, but it kind of got popularized in the jail system. It’s called Jailhouse Rock, and that’s why it’s close-quarters kind of stuff — so much elbows, knees and head and getting the fight over as quick as possible. It’s a kind of street-fighting thing. You never know what to expect.

Do you want to do more stuff like that in an action movie where you’re the star?

Hell yeah, I would love to. You start putting the word out, and we’re good. We’ll figure it out, we will figure it out.

Bonus questions

All about that torque

If money were no object, what would be your most important car purchase?

I love the Ford GT more than all of the cars I’ve driven [in the films], man. I love that car. Stick shift, the way it’s designed. It’s not as popular as all the rest, but I love it. And it’s American.

What was your favorite ride in this film?

Probably the Bugatti — not to be cliché, but that s— is like a spaceship on wheels, you know? It’s so much fun. If you literally accidentally tap the damn pedal, it’s moving. So much torque.

Own spring cleaning

Don't let the piles of clutter scare you. Here's how to tackle the mess.

MARIANNE HAYES
letters@metro.us

Cleaning out all the junk tucked away in the nooks and crannies of your home can be a daunting task. But parting with things like old knickknacks, clothing and receipts actually comes with some serious perks, like a clear mind and a more Zen environment.

With a new season upon us, spring cleaning represents the perfect opportunity to purge your home of clutter — and bring some fresh, new energy into your space. Professional organizer Jeni Aron shares her best tips for tackling the job.

Approach spring cleaning bit by bit, working in one-hour increments until your home is decluttered, Aron advises.

Start with your closet

Now is the time to reevaluate your winter wardrobe.

"If anything needs to be repaired, do that now so that it's ready for next season," Aron says. "And if you're done with that coat, and it's seen better days, then it's time to donate it."

Donating and selling old clothes can actually be a killer way to bring in some extra income (see our story on eBay tips on page 13). Look for consignment or thrift shops in your area that pay for donations. If you strike out, giving them away at least comes with a nice tax write-off. As for the winter stuff you are keeping, store it so it's out of sight.

"And take a good look at your spring wardrobe," Aron adds. "Are these items you would purchase today? Does anything need to be repaired or hemmed? Now is the time, before the season truly kicks in, to take care of all those little things so that you're in good shape for when it gets warm."

Clean out your kitchen

If you haven't done it in a while, take the time to clean out your fridge. This includes trashing old and expired products.

"Give your refrigerator a good cleanout because we're now entering the fresh fruits and vegetables stage, so you want to have a nice clean fridge for all of that," Aron says.

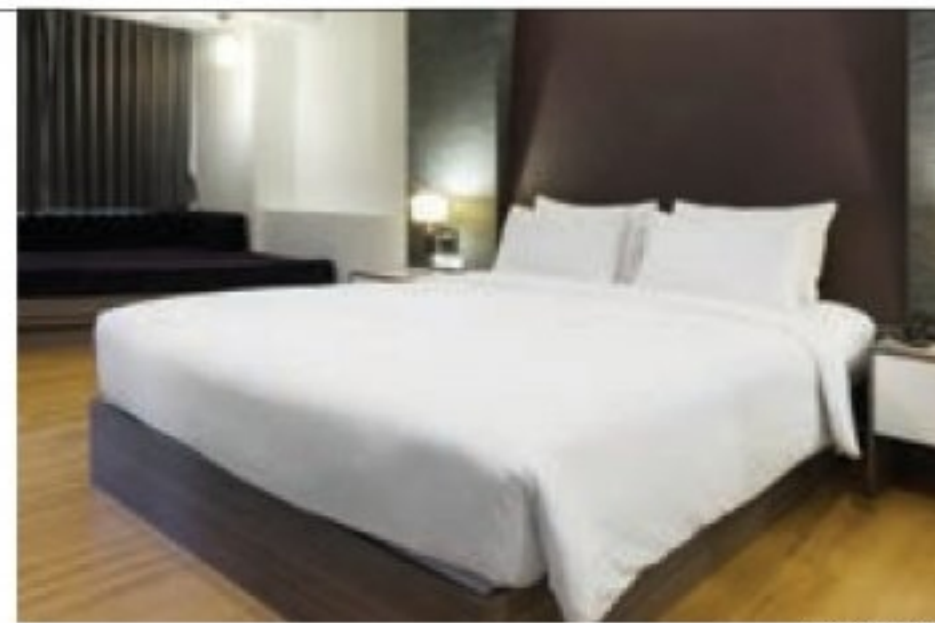

Revitalizing your kitchen also includes taking a close look at your cooking supplies. If you made a lot of soups and stews this winter, it may be time to replace your pots. The same goes for glassware, plates and other products that are worn out.

Replace your bedding

Ditch the heavy winter bedding for a lighter, fresher option that reflects the new season. Aron recommends storing heavier bedding and opting for either a floral print or an all-white setup, both of which reflect the crispness of spring.

"Now is also a good time to do rug cleaning, so it isn't a bad idea to either hire a professional or do it yourself," she adds. "And now that you're going to have your windows open more, think about changing over heavy curtains for something lighter and breezier."

In other words, choose accessories that will optimize natural light and fresh air.

Expert advice: How to sell on eBay

Spring is finally here (supposedly), which means it's the perfect time to clean up your closet and clear the clutter from the rest of your home. It's not easy to throw away things you paid a pretty penny for, but you don't have to toss everything in the dumpster.

Suzanne Wells, author of the blog "eBay Selling Coach," started her eBay career after she got divorced and lost her job in 2003. Now, Wells is a top seller on eBay and supports her family with the money she makes. She shows us how to turn our trash into treasure on eBay.

Suzanne Wells / PROVIDED

1 Don't throw out your broken goods

"There's a lot of repurposing," says Wells, who uses a Keurig coffeemaker as an example. "The water tank itself will sell for $20; the lid to the water tank will sell for $10 and the carousel stand that holds the coffee can sell for $30," she says. "Things in the kitchen cabinets that look like a jumbled mess are highly desirable on eBay, especially if it's an older model, because they may not make it anymore. People go to eBay and find the parts they need." She also says sellers can list parts from other kitchenwares, computers, electronics and old game consoles. Sort through your electronics: Wells says even VCRs are worth something on eBay.

2 Check completed listings

Wells says not to base your price on current listings, but completed listings so you can see the price at which similar items actually sold. "That's how you research. Research what sold instead of asking prices," she says.

3 Sell using the "Buy It Now" option

Auctions are the way to go if you want to get rid of something fast, but Wells says you'll get the most money if you go the "Buy It Now" route. Not only will you have the benefit of having your listing up for a longer period of time, ensuring you get more eyeballs on your item than in the seven-day time frame of auction listings, but you will also have your item show up on Google when you have a 30-day listing.

A newly renovated home on Beacon Hill was once the residence of Martin Luther King Jr.

LINDA CLARKE
letters@metro.us

With the release of the movie "Selma," and the anniversary of the civil rights march the film depicts, Martin Luther King Jr.'s name was once again in the news. Not that King and his cause of social justice is a subject that's ever far from headlines. But before King was at all famous, when he was simply a student, he studied at Boston University's School of Theology, then located on Chestnut Street on Beacon Hill. Since the mid-1960s, the building has been condos, and this week, a gorgeous, newly renovated home there went on the market.

"It's a nice historical reference, especially with the movie 'Selma' getting so much attention," says listing agent John D. Corcoran, vice president for Back Bay-based Otis & Ahearn. "But the fact that Martin Luther King studied there is more of a fun fact. It doesn't add or detract from its value."

Plus, it's Boston, a city filled with history: "Much of this part of Boston has so much history on an international level that properties with historical value are common."

In an age of celebrity, a famous name attached to a property gets a place noticed, though. Boston can't compete with New York or Los Angeles, where pop culture figures add cachet to the real estate, but, says Corcoran, "We have the Kennedys and, more recently, Tom Brady. That makes news."

Among the red brick buildings of Beacon Hill, 27 Chestnut Street stands out architecturally. The stone building is in the neo-Gothic style, and was built around 1916 with arched windows and a commanding carved stone arch over the double door entrance — both of which echo the European ecclesiastical standard, and its original use as a theology school. The building extends to Mount Vernon Street (70/72), and has basement passageways and a private central courtyard linking all three addresses. There is also a common roof deck with views over to the Charles River.

Old and historic is one thing, but no one wants to live with cranky old plumbing: "It is an historical building and this home has the charm of an old building, but all the amenities are modern," Corcoran assures us.

Because the building wasn't originally designed as homes, and was more utilitarian, the condo has a spacious loft-like feel and, adds Corcoran, "It has very high ceilings and is south-facing so it gets lots of sunlight."

Horoscope

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20

Be more attentive to your friends. Let superiors know your thoughts regarding workplace procedures. By speaking out, you will raise your profile.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21

Careless mistakes will be costly. Whether at home or at work, you need to pay strict attention to what you are doing. Letting your mind wander will lead to an unfortunate mishap.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20

Dispel criticism that co-workers place on you. If you let everyone know that you are a capable, hard worker, negative banter will dissipate.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22

Misunderstandings will lead to a series of problems. Be clear about your intentions, and allow others to voice their opinions. Keeping your feelings bottled up is a recipe for trouble.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22

Taking on too many professional responsibilities will affect your personal life. Consider taking a trip or spending a quiet evening at home with your family or other loved ones.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22

Dedicate some time to family entertainment. Whether you play games, share hobbies or participate in physical challenges, include loved ones in your life and make memories.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22

Don't get rattled by minor issues at home. Be more accepting. Your patience will contribute to a calmer setting that is more conducive to solving problems.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21

Emotional issues will cloud your judgment. Facing the truth and setting time aside to discuss matters with an important someone will help rectify the problem.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21

Consider turning one of your skills or ideas into a home business. Get input from someone with experience and find out what steps need to be taken.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20

You will get ahead by sharing your ideas with your superiors. Extra time may be required to put your plans in motion, but the potential gain will be worth your while.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18

Be prepared to make personal decisions. Don't try to do too much at once. Tackle each issue individually if you want to make the right choices. Strive for perfection.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20

Expand your mind by engaging in events that teach you about different cultures. Consider learning a second language or picking up a skill that can lead to greater prosperity. EUGENIA LAST

Hard work gets noticed

I am a German journalist, and I am working at the office of the Lutheran World Federation to the United Nations. Every morning I am happy to receive Metro New York. It is an important complement to my lecture of the New York Times. I would not know your newspaper without a very special person who is responsible for distributing it every morning. Mr. Eric Williams is part of my morning. With a lot of courtesy, a friendly smile and some motivating words he became an important part of my day. People miss him on the few days when he is not there. And even if he only has time for a few words, many people seem to trust him a lot and are looking forward to receiving their newspaper from him. A German weekly newspaper asked me to write short essays about my life in New York. Eric will be the protagonist of my next one. I just wanted you to know that your best employees are those who work every day throughout every kind of weather in the street. I congratulate you that you have people like Eric working for you.

A real shame

Re: 'Kelly Clarkson vs. Fox News fat-shaming' (Metro, April 6) Sure, Wallace's remark was ill-advised but it was far from "unsolicited" nor was it "cynically designed to get reactions like this one." And it wasn't on Fox News nor was it even on "national TV" (it was on Mike Gallagher's call-in radio show).

BARRY GLASGOW, VIA EMAIL

Deal or no deal

I am sure that, from the perspective of each participant, every deal, agreement, contract, etc., can be improved. However, congressional critics of the Iran nuclear deal should remember a wise saying that is often made about legislation: Don't let the perfect become the enemy of the good. MARK OROMANER

Celtics have come too far to be lottery-bound again

NBA. Reasons why it's OK to want the Celtics in the postseason.

So the Celtics are fighting for a playoff spot. Before we begin, let's all agree that even though the Eastern Conference is very weak compared to the Western Conference, it's a pretty big shock to see the Celtics in the position they're in.

Not only did they come into the season with a relatively weak roster, they then traded their two best players in Rajon Rondo and Jeff Green midway through the season, and then lost their best forward, Jared Sullinger, in February.

At this point in the season, you fall into one of two categories: You either want the Celtics to make the playoffs, or you don't. The argument for not making the playoffs is a pretty simple one. The worse the Celtics' record is, the better chance they get at a lower pick in the NBA draft — and a shot at the No. 1 overall pick. And by the way, there are more than a few great prospects in this year's draft. If they make the playoffs, they can kiss that goodbye.

And while that was the consensus opinion at the start of the season, some fans are changing their tune after getting a little taste of winning basketball over the last two months.

So let's justify why it's OK to cheer these Celtics on in their quest to make the playoffs:

They're in too deep

Take a look at the schedule and standings — there are only a handful of games left, and it's mathematically impossible for the Celtics to drop enough in the standings to get a really good shot at a top-five pick. Whether or not they make the playoffs, their pick is probably going to be in the low-to-mid-teens — so why not have a little fun in a playoff series?

Ainge has assets to move up

The Celtics have been stockpiling draft picks and assets for the last two seasons, and still have plenty of them to go around. No, you can't expect the C's to trade up to No. 1, but if there's someone Danny Ainge has his eye on and it looks like he may go a few picks ahead of the Celtics, the C's have what it takes to move up.

Let's see what they have

The Celtics aren't close to title contention — but they're closer than we thought. So when the games really count, who steps up? Who do we want sticking around? Now is the time to find out. And all it takes is one or two big free agents watching at home to think of themselves as the missing piece.

NBA power rankings | by James Toscano

No. 1
Warriors
(63-14)

The Warriors ran into a hot Spurs team on the road, but there's really nothing to worry about. A four-game homestand to close the season is a pretty sweet deal.

No. 2
Rockets
(53-24)

The Rockets scored a solid win in OKC, hanging on after James Harden fouled out. Dwight Howard's 22-point performance was a great sign as well.

No. 5
Clippers
(52-26)

A close, tough loss at Golden State last week is the only mark against this Clippers team since mid-March. They're playing their best basketball of the season.

No. 8
Grizzlies
(52-25)

The Grizzlies have fallen from the second to the third seed thanks to the Rockets and will play the Clippers this weekend in a game with huge seeding implications.

No. 11
Thunder
(42-35)

Uh oh. While it looked like the Thunder were going to hold onto the 8 seed last week, things have changed. Three straight losses and the Pelicans are closing in.

No. 3
Hawks
(57-19)

The Hawks crushed the Nets this past weekend, but it cost them Paul Millsap for the next two games (shoulder).

No. 6
Spurs
(47-26)

Of course, the Spurs would steamroll the best team in the NBA (Warriors). That's 17 wins over the past 20 games.

No. 9
Mavericks
(46-31)

Pretty much locked into the seventh seed, the Mavs enjoyed three days off before a stretch of five in eight days.

No. 12
Raptors
(45-32)

The Raps lost both games of a back-to-back last week to the Nets and Celtics. They're still without Kyle Lowry (back).

No. 4
Cavaliers
(50-27)

Cavs coach David Blatt thought the Bulls went "a little overboard" with the way they handled LeBron James. Teams will only go harder in the playoffs.

No. 7
Blazers
(50-27)

One concerning fact about the Blazers: They haven't beaten a playoff team since March 15. They've lost to the Grizzlies, Warriors and Clippers lately.

No. 10
Bulls
(46-31)

Derrick Rose is scheduled to return any day now, and may get a practice run before the playoffs. As always, though: How effective will he be?

No. 13
Wizards
(44-33)

It seemed as though the Wizards were set in the 5 spot but they're on a three-game win streak and just two games out of the 3 seed.

Kentucky invasion

The 2015 NBA draft will be flush with Kentucky Wildcats as head coach John Calipari said Tuesday that he expects five to seven players from his 2014-15 roster to jump to the pros this June. Willie Cauley-Stein, Karl-Anthony Towns, Aaron Harrison, Andrew Harrison and Trey Lyles are likely to declare for the draft and Dakari Johnson and Devin Booker could as well.

Betts and Pedroia the keys to success

It's clear the Red Sox' lineup will carry the team this season if they're in playoff contention, as demonstrated in Monday's 8-0 win over the Phillies. But, when it comes to the lineup, the player who is most important may not be who everyone thinks.

Nope, it's not David Ortiz. Not Mike Napoli. Or even newcomers Hanley Ramirez or Pablo Sandoval. It's Mookie Betts and Dustin Pedroia.

The leadoff and two-hole hitters need to get on base in order to maximize the potential of the heart of the Red Sox order. This is something that didn't go so well in 2014.

Last season, the Red Sox' first and second hitters in the lineup batted .265, which was 15th in baseball. In terms of on-base percentage it was worse as they had an OBP of .318, which was 19th in baseball. It clearly had an impact on Napoli, as he went from having 92 RBIs in 2013 to only 55 in 2014.

Dustin Pedroia and the Sox are back in action tonight. / GETTY IMAGES

By comparison, in 2013 the Red Sox' No. 1 and No. 2 hitters combined for a .295 batting average and a .355 on-base percentage, both second in all of baseball. The top of the order's success certainly played a major part in the Red Sox winning the World Series that season.

There's little doubt that if Betts and Pedroia can get on base they will be driven in. Ortiz is a career .299 hitter with runners in scoring position, and he isn't the only player in the lineup who has a good success rate. Sandoval is .294 for his career, including .291 last year, while Ramirez's lifetime average is .298, including 2014's .321 mark.

On Monday, the Red Sox finished with nine hits. Betts and Pedroia had five of them, including three home runs. Granted, the power isn't likely to continue, but the hits and getting on base are what count.

"I'm back to who I am," Pedroia, who had wrist surgery last year, told reporters. "I could tell in the offseason I was healthy and back to normal." RYAN HANNABLE

6-WEEK DENTAL RESEARCH STUDY

Individuals 18-70 years old are asked to join a 6-week study of a new liquid topical medication that may reduce gum inflammation and bleeding.

- Only 2 weeks of treatment with a follow up visit 4 weeks later
- Qualified people will come to the clinic daily (Monday through Friday) for product application by the study dentist
- Routine dental and gum exams
- Total of $500 compensation ($40 at each daily visits and $100 at the end of the study)
